Governors and Governors

There was a rousing knock at the door of the Governor's private office. "Well, come in. Don't break the door down," came a hearty voice from inside.

A tall, slim, red-headed chap with a pleasant blue eye pushed his way into the sanctum. Not with any fear that he would be kicked out, but with the confidence born of a friendship with the owner of the welcoming voice.

"Howdy, Governor," said the slim one, settling softly into a comfortable chair in close proximity to the Chief Executive's big walnut desk. "Howdy, Mar; what has broke loose today?" asked the Big Man, and his smile was real. The hand-clasp was warm and human. The two understood the meaning of fellowship.

And yet the Big Man was the Governor of Oregon, George Chamberlain. Not big physically, but large, immense, expansive, humanly, personally, officially and every other way. The only democratic of freeholder in the state administration, yet he was closer to the people of the state than all of the others bunched together.

And the Slim Man was only an every day, busy, progressive, wide-awake newspaper reporter for one of the Portland papers. He called on the Governor every day; yes, sometimes twice a day, and he never took up any of the Big Man's time unnecessarily.

It was always some matter of importance that made the Slim Man's long legs patter-patter towards the big oak door with the brass hinges which was invariably opened by the same pleasant voice—unless, of course, the caller was some anarchistic individual, spring poet, or man with more wheels in his head than he could properly revolve. It was, as I have said, a matter of importance, and the PEOPLES' BUSINESS that sent him to the Governor's office.

And the Governor was always ready to talk about the PEOPLES' BUSINESS unless there was nothing to talk about. And in that case the reporter never waited, and the Big Man never talked.

And this is the secret of George Chamberlain's great hold on the people of Oregon. This is the reason they backed him up in the execution of the initiative and Referendum Laws. This is the reason that they sent him to the United States Senate, and in spite of all the powers that could be brought to bear to make the Legislature desire Statement No. 1, the people would not stand for any such work, and his position as confirmed by a majority vote.

All because George Chamberlain as Governor, was ever ready to take the people, the voters into his confidence, and never turned a deaf ear to the press when it wanted to know the PROGRESS OF THE PEOPLES' BUSINESS. It mattered not whether a Foreign Potentate was closeted with the Big Man, whether the Attorney General wanted an opinion in a hurry, whether a death warrant awaited his signature, George Chamberlain always considered the GREAT OPINION AND THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE FIRST, and never refused to tell them what they wanted to know. It is said that no newspaperman ever abused his confidence and that he never showed discrimination or partiality.

And how about Albert D. Mend, past Governor of the State of Washington? Here you have it. On the parlor car of a west bound Northern Pacific train one day the Governor, accompanied by Johnnie Atkinson, Attorney General, met a Tacoma Ledger man. The reporter was bootied and spurred about a certain appointment that was the bone of contention between the Governor and some of his political friends. Now Mend was not the best Governor Washington ever had, but he was a good hearted, big brained man, who tried to please the great majority of the people without regard to the whims of a few peanut politicians. And he never turned a newspaper man down, if he knew he could trust him, and he could trust most of the boys who called on him.

"Well, I'll tell you the story Tom," he said, shaking hands heartily, "but is isn't ripe for release. You hold it, and when I make the appointment, you've got the details."

And he told the story in graphic detail. And the newspaper man at once understood why the minority ENEMIES of the Governor did not want the man he wanted. Because the newspaper man knew that the other man was crooked. HERE IS THE BEAUTY OF A GOVERNOR TELLING A NEWSPAPER MAN A STORY EVEN WHEN HE DOES NOT WANT IT RELEASED. IT GIVES THE REPORTER THE INSIDE FACTS, THE MOTIVE OF THE ACTION, AND SHOWS WHETHER THE GOVERNOR IS PROPERLY SERVING THE PEOPLE. THE REPORTER CAN TELL HIS EDITOR, THE EDITOR CAN DETERMINE WHETHER THE

GOVERNOR IS ON THE RIGHT TRACK, AND FRAME HIS POLICY AND ATTITUDE PROMPTLY AND JUSTLY.

And Albert Mend never set any hour for newspaper man to call on him. He never had a newspaper man announce his name, except that it was a special occasion, or the writer was undesirable, in which case Mend would not see him at all. If he was very busy when the reporter called, and could not talk to him at once, he invited him to "hang out" and wait until he could see him. But that reporter never went away empty handed. I have heard the Governor say: "Dick, the outlook for a story is rotten today, but here is a small item. Better than nothing."

And he never jumbled with public matters that were the PEOPLES' BUSINESS. Unfinished business with him was public, and he always gave what features had developed, and the progress of the matter in hand.

And there were no formalities about his reception of newspaper men. HE DID NOT TAKE AS HIS CODE OF OFFICIAL ETIQUETTE ANY SET FORMS USED IN WASHINGTON, OR ELSEWHERE. For it is well known the President Roosevelt pronounced the blue-room-pass-in-your-card system in vogue there when he took hold, as detestable, and ever since has been less conventionalities practiced BETWEEN THE PEOPLE AND THE PEOPLES PUBLIC SERVANTS.

Now of course, I landed in Honolulu, delightfully ignorant of the affairs of state. I had heard good and curious things about Hawaii and her past administrations, some things that were not good. But to pass to the present Governor, you know that a newspaper man has a hankering to feel that he has the confidence and esteem of a Governor, the Chief Executive of a People, the same as he wants to have the confidence of his employer. But somehow Governor Frear won't, or can't let out any warmth.

He is the strangest type of all public officials I have ever seen. Very pleasant to address, dignified to a fault, extremely courteous, and yet—yet he lacks the great thing that makes the world go around today, the "HUMAN INTEREST FEELING." I don't know how else to express it. He looks at the newspapermen sitting in front of him, across his desk, smiles pleasantly, drums his fingers on the desk edge, and perhaps—very cautiously—as if he might be doing wrong—tells them that he has not decided to appoint a Treasurer today.

Is it possible that Governor Frear has not so long in the cold judicial atmosphere of the Chamber of the Chief Justice—where NOTHING IS GIVEN OUT UNTIL IT IS COMPLETED—that his nature has become submerged with the hard coating of secrecy?

The people want you to be their Governor, Mr. Frear, and they respect you, but you want to be GOVERNOR AND RESPECT THEM.

They are not unnecessarily inquisitive, but they do want to know what is going on. What you are doing. They are deeply interested, and only ask that you keep them posted on THEIR AFFAIRS WHICH YOU ARE HANDLING AS THEIR EXECUTIVE, THEIR CHIEF CLERK IF YOU PLEASE.

Now I may be wrong. Perhaps I am doing Governor Frear a wrong. Certainly I do not intend to, but these are my early impressions—of a greenhorn among you—that is as to the affairs but an old timer in the newspaper work, and one who has been mixed up considerable with Governors, talked with them, traveled with them and reported what they had to say for close upon ten years.

It is my humble impression that even a GOVERNOR CAN BE A GOOD AND GREAT GOVERNOR WHO EVER PLACES THE PEOPLES' AFFAIRS BEFORE HIS OWN AND HAS THEIR CONFIDENCE.

The most conspicuous example of the power of the peoples' confidence and public opinion, was when President Roosevelt was returned to the White House by an overwhelming vote, of whom—OF THE PEOPLE WHO RULE THE WORLD.

AND THE PRESS IS THE MOST POWERFUL INFLUENCE TO MOULD PUBLIC OPINION. Every man, in high or low position cannot escape its power, and should respect it. If he has any hopes for future success and standing among the PEOPLE he must not forget that he is the MASTER WORKMAN FOR THE PEOPLE AND MUST DO A GOOD JOB.

It is said that when the great Napoleon, after he had been dethroned and repudiated by the French people, stood on the battlements of St. Helene, and gazed with burning regret across the sea to his country—where he had conquered nations—but he did not have the love and confidence of his people.

Mind, I do not say Governor Frear is not an excellent executive, I believe his long judicial training and experience has made of him a good Gov-

THE EYES OF THOSE HIGHER UP AT WASHINGTON ARE ON HIM, and in the end it will be either out of him that HE HAS or HAS NOT been THE GOVERNOR THE PEOPLE OF HAWAII WANT.
